

Change the way you approach
life problems:
from single-loop to triple-loop

Inspired by Robert Ellis, Coaching From Essence

We usually focus on single-loop: Do differently

Solve problems by:

- trying different things
- tweaking it and try again.

Adjust what we DO until we get it right.

Example:

If networking feels awkward and unproductive, how can you make it better?

If you ask "What should I DO...", you are using single-loop approach

Single loop approach will provide you with
ACTION- FOCUSED ADVICE

Research on participants

Rehearse what you will say

Offer values before asking for something

Follow up and stay consistent

You will be more effective, but networking still feels draining.

Discipline can only get you so far.
You might reach your limit quickly.

Let's try double-loop: Think differently

From: What should I do?

To: How should I THINK about it?

- Shifting mindset
- Changing actions and outcomes as a result

How should I THINK about networking?

OLD THOUGHTS

01. Networking is a chore that I have to do.

02. It's a showcase of myself

03. It's about how many people I talk to

NEW THOUGHTS

"Networking can be made enjoyable"

It's an opportunity to exchange ideas and learn about each other.

It's about the quality of the connection that I build

From new THINKING to DOING with better intention

NEW THOUGHTS

01. Networking can be made enjoyable

02. It's an opportunity to exchange ideas and learn about each other.

03. It's about the quality of the connection that I build

NEW ACTIONS

Connect to people you are truly interested in

Ask genuine questions and stay curious

Follow up with real care and attention to the person

An even deeper transformation happens at the triple-loop:
embracing a new identity.

Beyond changing how you think, you change your identity "Who am I in this situation?"

The new identity will then guide how you think & do

Who are you at a networking event?

I WAS...

01. ...just an attendee.

02. ...an optimizer, focusing on my own benefits.

03. ...a presenter for myself.

I AM...

...a host, ensuring everyone is having a good time.

...a connector, building relationships among interesting people.

...a learner, genuinely interested in building more knowledge for myself and others

Deep transformation happens when your identity changes.

Internalizing this new identity,
you naturally THINK and DO more effectively, in alignment with this new BEING.

Sometimes, DOING differently is only a surface solution.

To get unstuck, you need to go further back, to the thinking and being that influences your actions.

