

WHY YOUR BRANDING IS A

JUKE

OKAY. LET'S GET SACRILEGIOUS

LET'S DECONSTRUCT
A JOKE...

“People used to laugh at me when I
said I wanted to be a
comedian.

Well they're not laughing now.”

Bob Monkhouse

"People used to
laugh at me when I
said I wanted to be a
comedian."

A yellow hand is shown from the side, holding a yellow star-shaped card with the word "PAYOFF" printed on it in black capital letters. A speech bubble originates from this hand, containing the text:

Well they're not
laughing now."

We put two and two together and unlock the
idea for ourselves.

"People used to
laugh at me when I
said I wanted to be a
comedian."

OUR ENJOYMENT IS THE
REWARD FOR OUR PARTICIPATION. AND
COMPLETING THE JOURNEY

Well they're not
laughing now."

HOW DOES THIS RELATE TO YOUR BRAND?

This iconic print ad campaign from 1982 for Stella Artois, featured design classics, such as an Eames chair, Rickenbacker guitar and a Lambretta scooter being used as (essentially) a bottle opener for their premium priced beer.

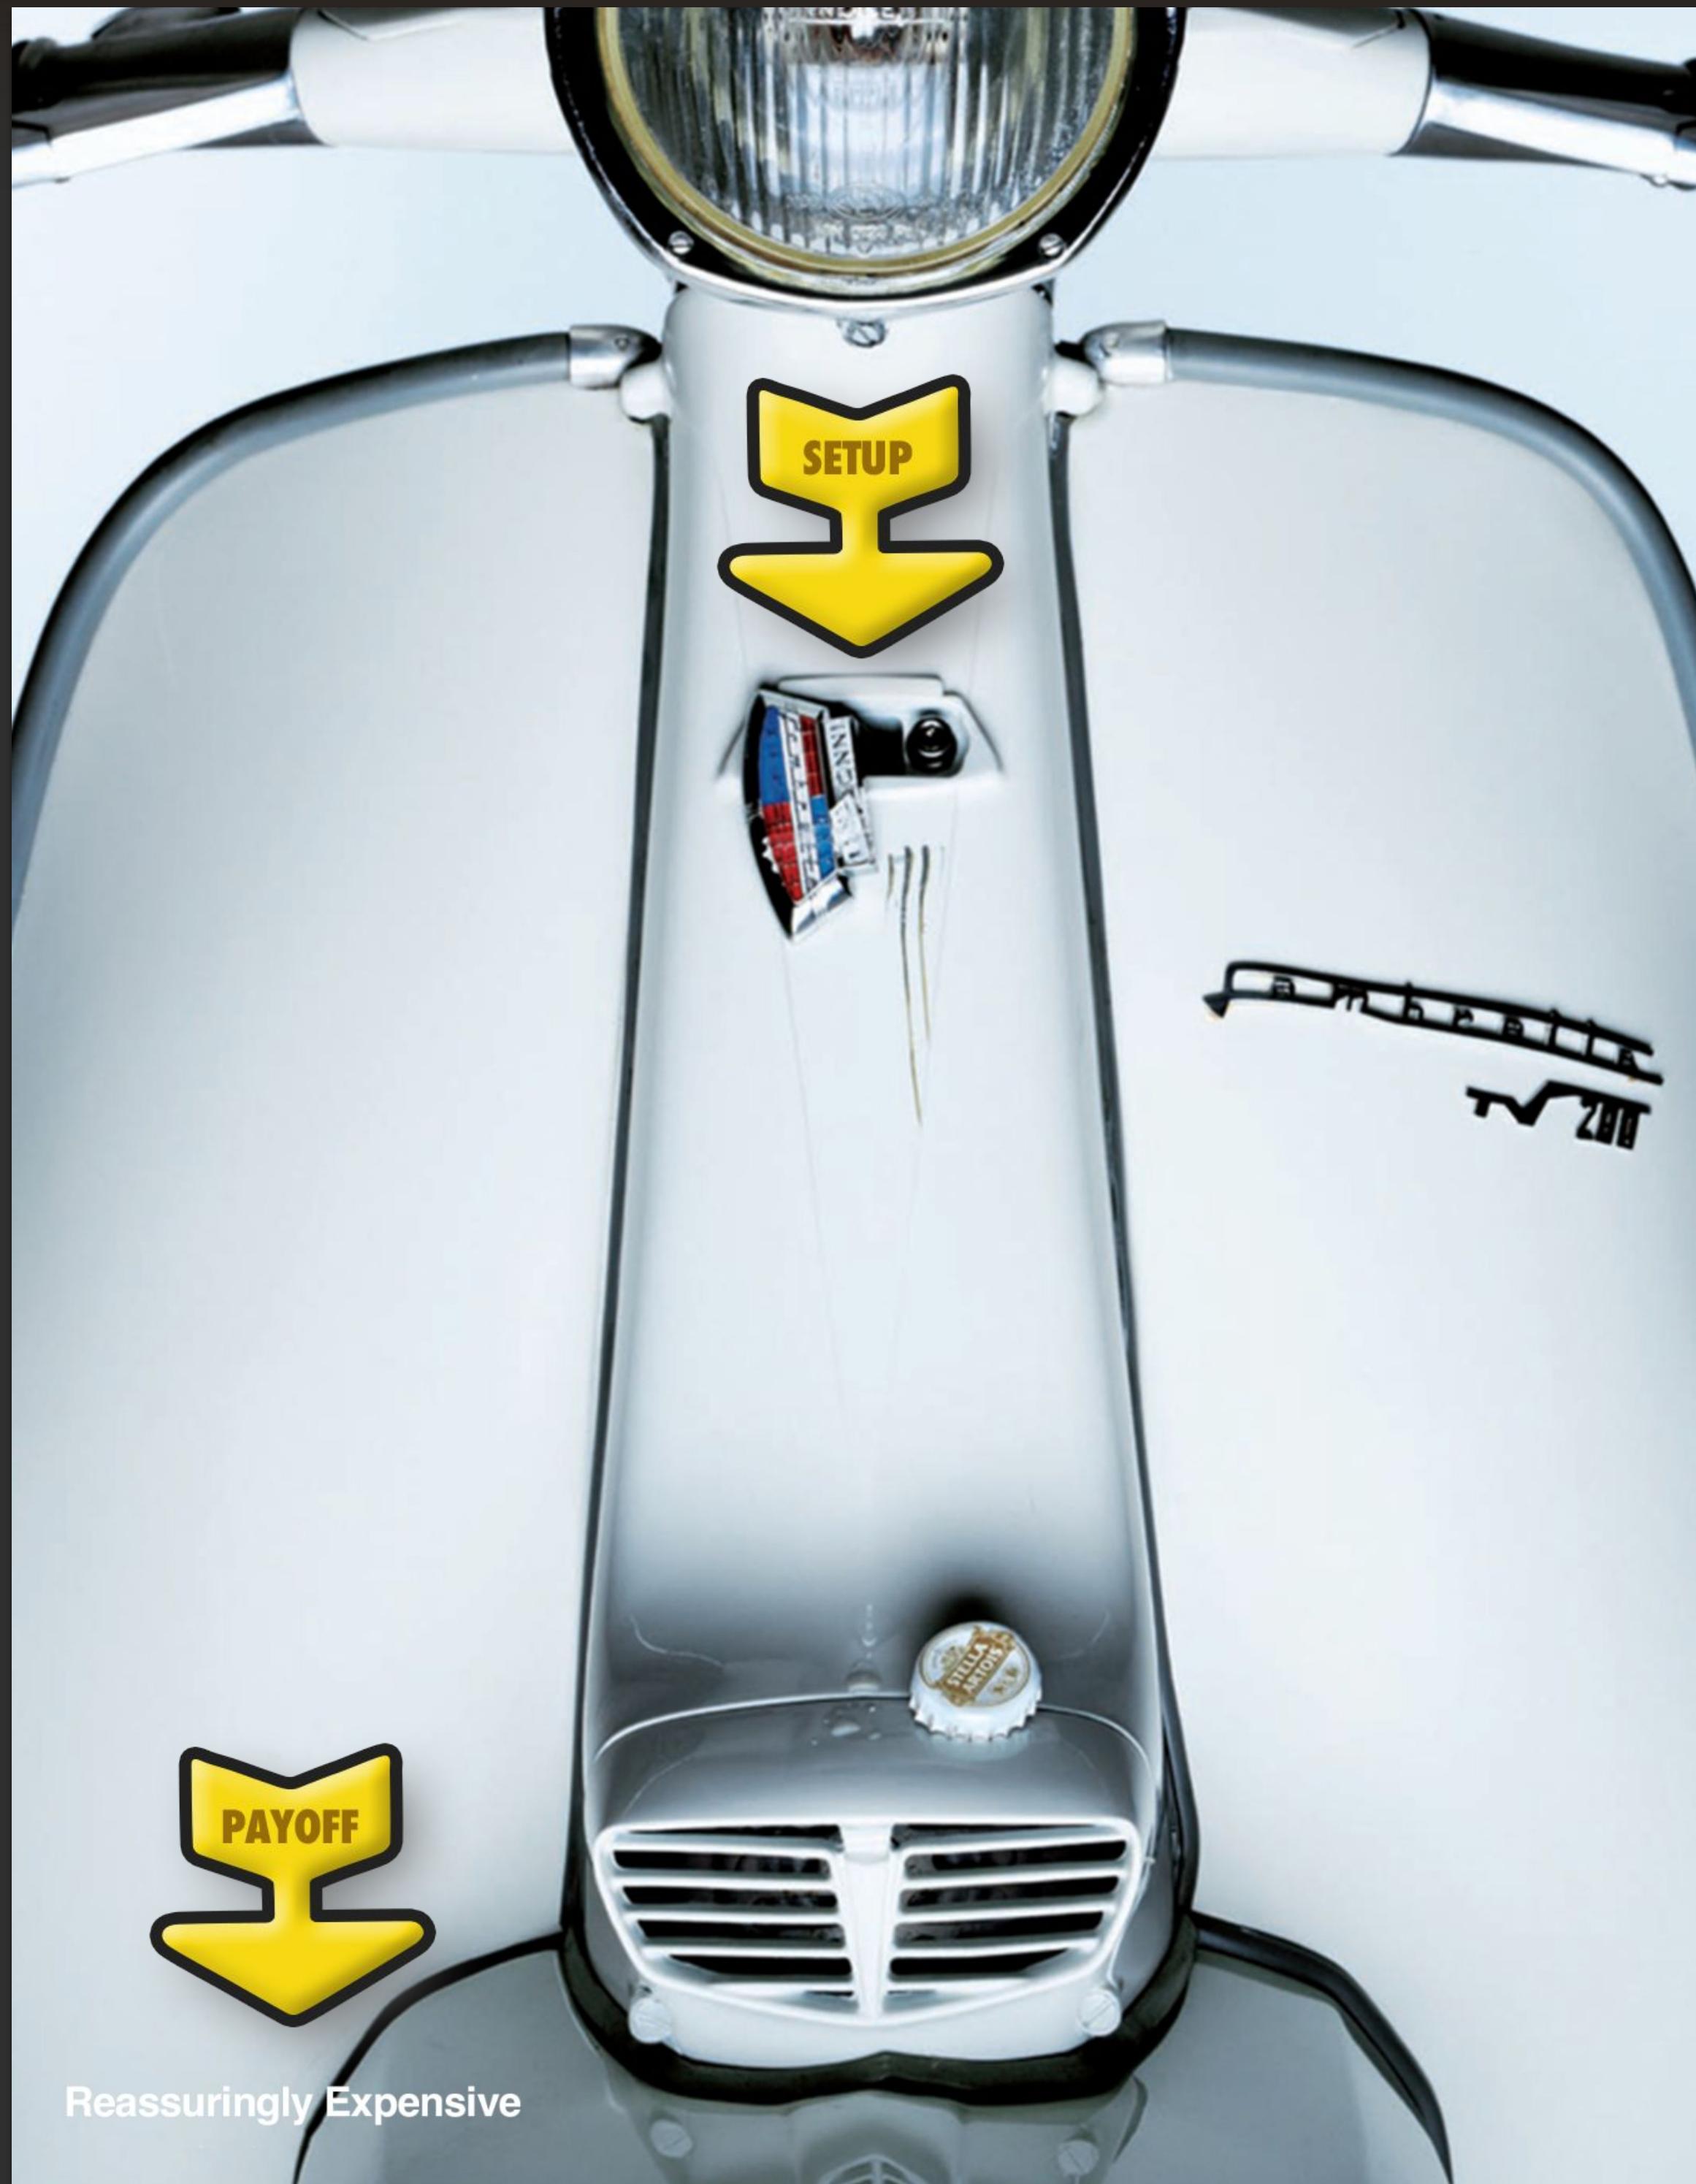

Each advert tells a little story.

Reassuringly Expensive

Stella - Reassuringly Expensive Campaign

SET UP: Is this the wanton vandalism of a top of the range Lambretta? And what's with the bottle top? The photo is like a mini crime scene.

PAYOUT: The strapline is revealed. “Reassuringly Expensive”. After a moment or two the narrative is filled in by the audience. You are now actively taking part. You are both privy to a secret. The viewer feels smarter and respects for being trusted to participate.

UNRAVEL THE JOURNEY

AND ALSO NOTE YOUR EMOTIONAL RESPONSE...

Nivea - Night Cream

SET UP: A pot of Nivea cream is left half opened. Revealing a crescent moon shape

PAYOUT: It only requires one word to finish the story. The simple execution embodies the essence of the product.

Kit-Kat - Direct Mail

SET UP: A parody of a Post Office undelivered note will get your attention.

PAYOUT: Kit-Kats are “too chunky” to fit through a letter box. The payoff evokes a fun story. It’s a lovely brand experience. And hey. Free Kit-Kat.

Kraft Cheese

SET UP: A Kraft print ad gives us another “crime scene” to ponder.

PAYOUT: The story only makes sense once you realise Kraft have added extra calcium to their cheese for “stronger bones”.

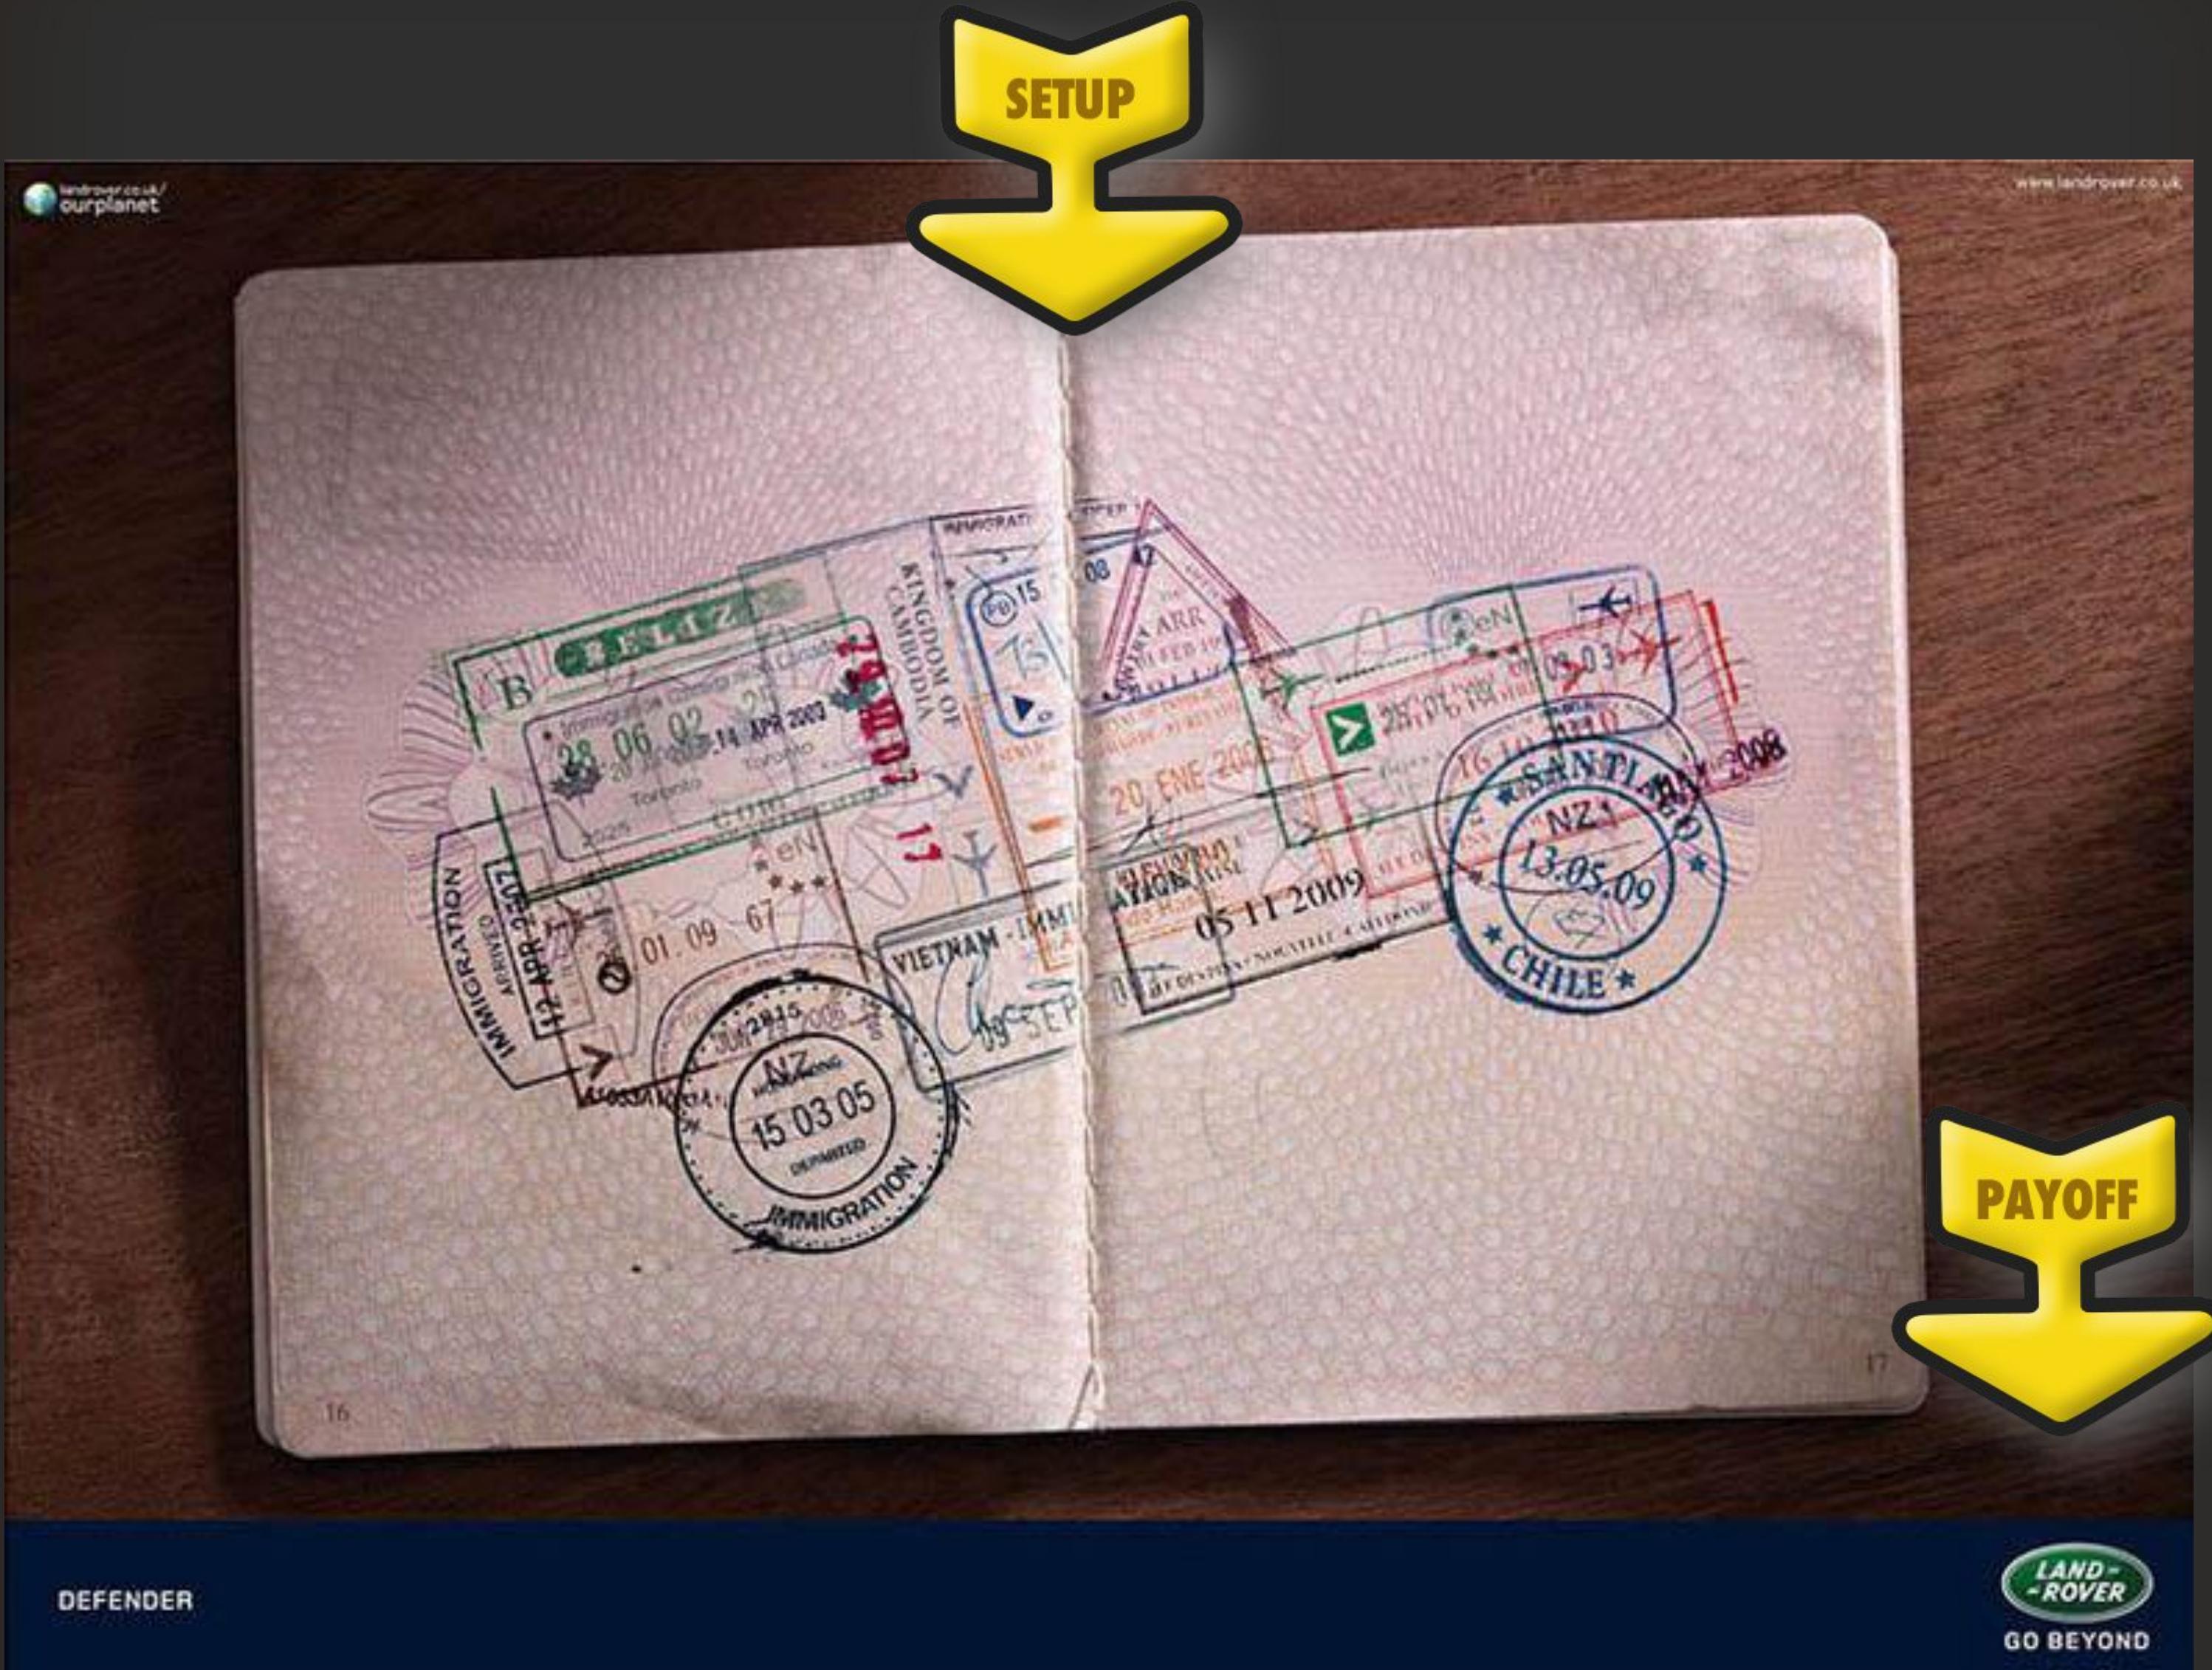

DEFENDER

LAND
- ROVER
GO BEYOND

Land Rover - Defender

SET UP: A passport page from a seasoned traveller. Who has seemingly visited some of the world most exciting and environmentally demanding places. Clearly in the shape of a Land Rover Defender.

PAYOUT: The brand is revealed. And the story is complete.

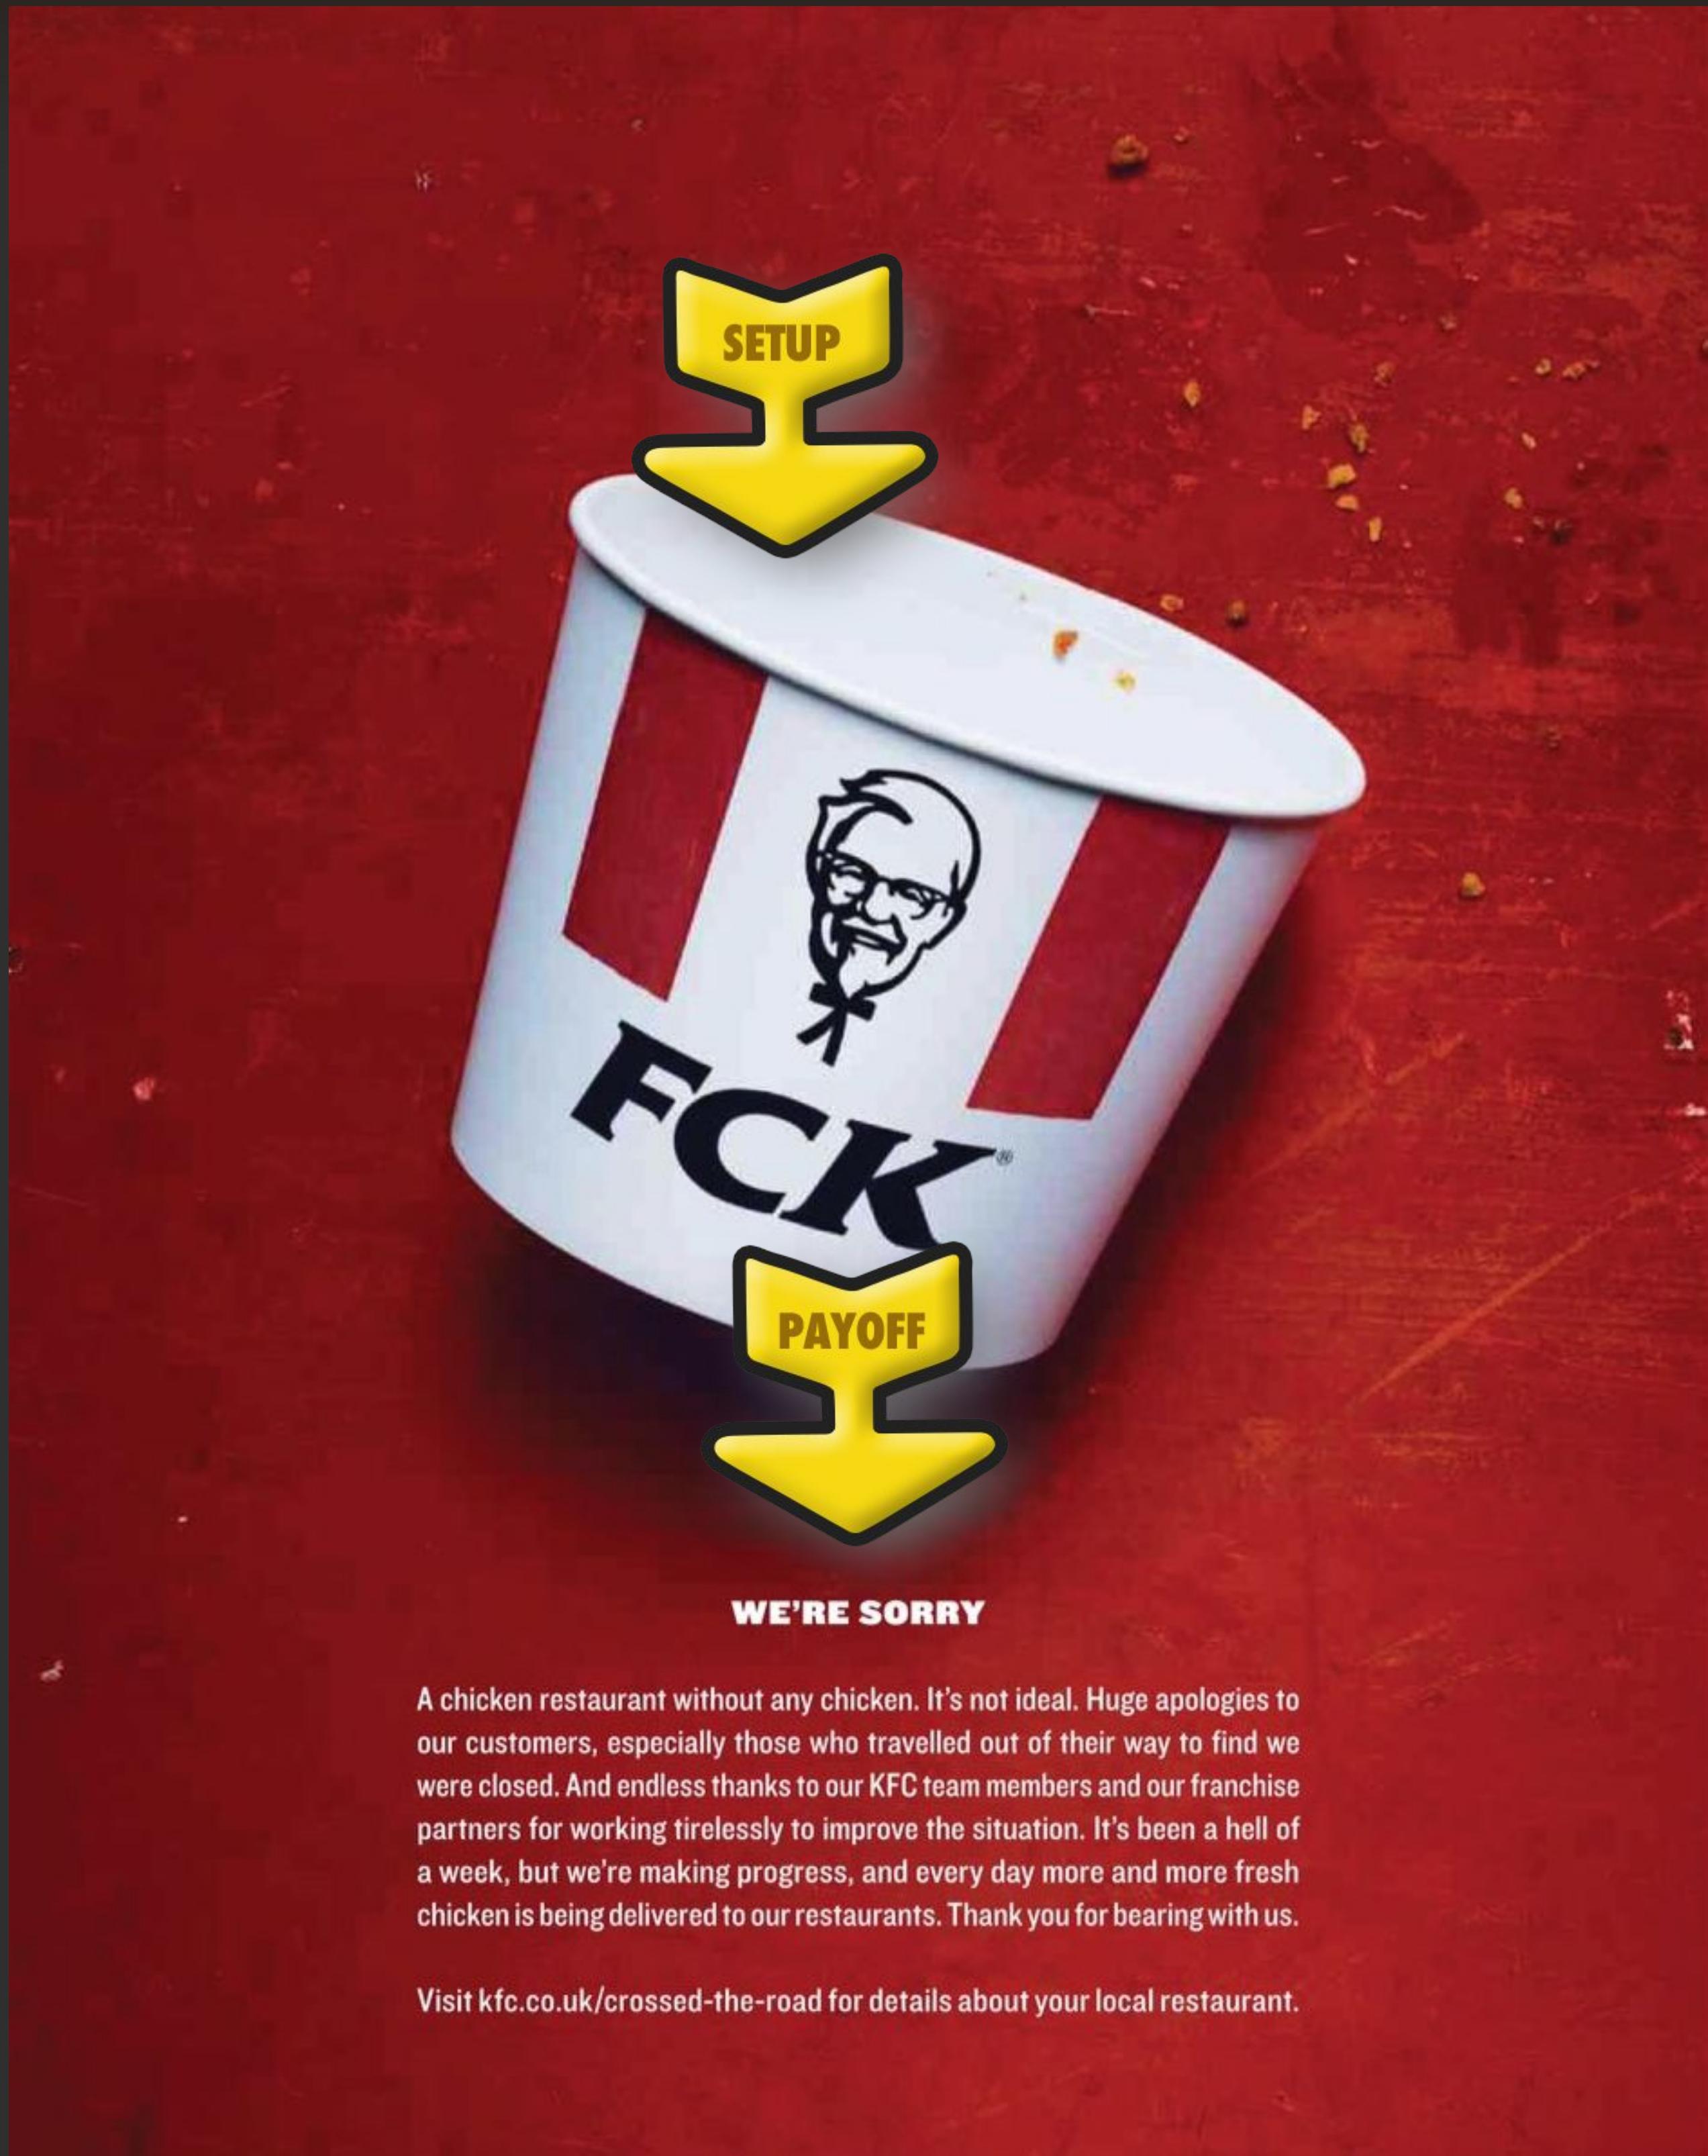

WE'RE SORRY

A chicken restaurant without any chicken. It's not ideal. Huge apologies to our customers, especially those who travelled out of their way to find we were closed. And endless thanks to our KFC team members and our franchise partners for working tirelessly to improve the situation. It's been a hell of a week, but we're making progress, and every day more and more fresh chicken is being delivered to our restaurants. Thank you for bearing with us.

KFC: “We’re Sorry”

SET UP: The implied expletive sets up an edgy and intriguing scenario.

PAYOUT: KFC apologises for running out of chicken due to delivery issues. Not only have they been transparent, honest and playful in their apology. They turned an embarrassing faux pas in to a viral comms opportunity.

Land Rover - Jeep

SET UP: A Print ads show us an animal with the motto “See whatever you want to see.”

PAYOUT: On rotating the page the reader is delighted to discover another animal from a different part of the world. Implying the robust/durable nature of the vehicle.

Apple - Ultra thin Macbook Pro

SET UP: This press ad makes the payoff physical.

PAYOUT: The reader is left to tie the pieces together for themselves. Clearly Apple believe their customers can be trusted to 'Think Different'.
